JUMP

WHENEVER THE FINANCIER PULLS THE STRING

COPYRIGHT. 1939

BY ALFRED LAWSON

Address at Masonic Temple, Jackson, Michigan. Taken Verbatim by B. Freese, M. G. D. C. S.

UNLESS YOU KNOW THESE THINGS YOU ARE NOT EDUCATED

The children used to play with a little hand maneuvered tool that they called a Jumping Jack. It was made in the image of a man and whenever they pulled the strings it would jump. Pieces of wood were connected by springs and hinges and the effigy of man was made to flop around and act as grotesquely as he does in his natural state.

The financiers apparently consider that wooden tool a good representation of a man for they have adopted a phantasmagoria whereby, when they pull the strings, men Jump like Jacks.

They may not make men jump so idiotically physically, but they certainly make them Jump to the limit mentally and morally. Nobody can move these days unless the financier pulls the strings.

Now don't get mad at yourself when I say these things as madness is the end of usefulness. Just investigate and see if what I am telling you is true or not. You cannot change bad conditions by breeding hate in yourself and poisoning your mental system with putrid fumes but you can make matters better by careful reasoning and proper action.

Less than twenty international financiers pull the strings that make one hundred and thirty million Americans jump as they want them to.

You, the people, can stop such fantastic manipulations if you will act sensibly. Nobody can make me believe that a hundred and thirty million people can't lick twenty financiers. You can, if you will only pull together.

But you let those twenty little monkeys separate you into different gangs of fighting fools and you slam bang at each other until you have whipped yourselves.

That handful of financiers could not mistreat a hundred and thirty million people without accomplices. So they have touts who pretend to be your friends to do their dirty work for them.

These touts are the heads of your associations and when they pull their strings on the inside of the organization that you call yours, you hop around like lead filled toads and do exactly what they tell you to do.

• And that isn't the worst of it. You pay them fees and dues to do it. It isn't bad enough to have the touts of the financiers run your organization and make you flop around like a chicken with its head off but you actually hypnotize yourself into paying for the privilege.

You must stop that. You must learn for yourself that touts of the financiers are at the head of every organization in America except the Direct Credits Society.

After having spent more than a half century in active connection with organizations of every kind and nature, I make that statement positive.

If any of you dupes who are paying fees and dues don't believe me, go and make the touts prove it for you.

How make touts prove it?

Just say to the top leader of your organization, "Come out publicly and say, Abolish Interest."

They won't do that. But they will turn you aside with some fancy words such as, "We are going to balance the budget."

Do you know what that means?

Stripped of its hocus pokus it simply means that the financiers have gotten you so far into debt on the interest that you can't pay, that they have to raise your taxes to enable you to pay it and thereby balance your accounts with them.

So whenever they tell you, "We've got to balance the budget," say, "Yes, you are going to charge us more taxes to pay more interest to the financiers." They will know that you are right and that they are wrong, but they are enabled to skin you that way and make Jumping Jacks of you. So they grin to themselves at your expense.

Try and find one organization in America that isn't run by touts who take their orders from financiers. They educate you from the day you are born to do as they tell you, right or wrong, and you brag about your education.

You say you go to college? Petty Puppy snuff! What do you get there? You learn to smoke cigarettes and you learn to say, "Raw! Raw! Raw. Hypotyposis Bah!"

Touts of the financier teach you that. You smoke so many cigarettes that you lose control of your mental machinery and then you bray like donkeys.

Coming here yesterday I passed through Ann Arbor. There were a lot of students at the station. Many of them were there to bid good-bye to friends. About ten of them stood in a row and each one smoked a cigarette. I thought,

"Good Undertakers! Is there nobody in this college who doesn't smoke cigarettes?"

That is just what the financier wants those kids to do—weaken themselves with dope. He can make better Jumping Jacks out of them when they are dopey.

History states that China used to be the most powerful nation on earth.

What happened to it?

Greedy financiers in those days wanted to skin the Chinese people, and so they fed them dope; first, little cigarettes with only two per cent dope in them. But as their victims got more and more "nervous" and called for more and more dope the people as a whole grew weaker and weaker as a nation until the little Japs with one-tenth of their numbers take their properties from them, rich and poor alike.

Now, the financiers of America encourage cigarette smoking through the sale of them to the people. They put on huge signboards, pictures of handsome athletes with muscles, as big as mine. They stick poisonous cigarettes in their faces.

No man with muscles like mine would smoke cigarettes. But they fool children and make weak boys think they can become strong athletes by smoking dope.

They also paint beautiful women on sign boards. You can't make a woman look as beautiful with paint as she is without it. The little girls don't know that and as they see a painted woman smoking a cigarette they think, "I would like to be as beautiful as that," so they start to paint and smoke cigarettes.

That is the way the American people acquire the dope habit.

There was held in France recently a convention of Dope Experts from all parts of the world. The statistics published afterwards were: China, first; America, second in dope smoking.

Can you beat that? America, second in dope smoking among all nations of the world. Great record, isn't it? We ought to be proud of that, hadn't we? Yes, some day America may lead the world as a dope smoking nation.

If the American people go down hill as dope smokers much farther they will follow history and do as China did, thus making it possible for the Japs, reinforced by a new mixed race to come over and take the U.S.A. from you. To pray like donkeys won't stop it.

If I had children, I wouldn't let one of them go to high school where young girls and boys are graduated as cigarette smokers, cocktail drinkers and dance hall artists.

The touts of the financiers are bringing up American children as the touts of the financiers brought up Chinese children when China was the richest and most powerful nation on Earth.

What do they teach American youth in colleges? What do they jam into their heads for Economics?

Don't laugh, but they make gullible students believe that the people of this country are going hungry because they raise too much food. They infer that because we are able to produce more wealth than we need that we should have none. They pretend that "over production" is the cause of our hunger.

Well, I'll be ham-strung! I cannot have an automobile because there are too many of them.

If I had the sense of a Billy Goat I would think that until every family in the world can own an automobile and have a comfortable home, properly refrigerated in the summer and heated in the winter, that no such thing as over production could exist.

Until you get these filthy streets in these dirty cities cleaned up the only over-production I can notice is the bacteria and flies that you breed from the filth you let lay in your alleys, because the financiers have withdrawn the money from circulation that should be used to pay for the clean-up work.

That over-production of filth comes back to you in the shape of disease, caused by the bacteria that is bred in filth and carried by the flies to your babies.

So, when your baby gets sick hereafter just understand that YOU are the cause of it, because YOU are upholding this infernal over-production of filth system that does it. Don't blame these horrible conditions on anybody else but yourself if you will do nothing to prevent them.

If I wouldn't try to stop the swindling financiers from carrying down to degradation the people of this earth then I would blame myself for it. And you and YOU are responsible likewise, if you won't do something to stop it.

Do you think they know anything about physics in colleges?

Well, to be truthful, I never knew anyone who graduated from a college who knew anything about either economics or physics.

For instance you ask them, "What makes everything move?"

"Oh," they say, "that's motion."

"Well," you ask, "what's motion?"

"Oh," they say, "nobody knows that."

They also claim that energy moves everything, too. So you ask, "What is energy?"

"Oh," they say, "nobody knows that."

Then you ask, "If motion moves it, and energy moves it, what else moves it?"

So they answer, "Vibration."

Then you ask, "What causes vibration?"

"Nobody knows that," is their answer.

So that is the stuff and nonsense they flim-flam you with in colleges. They don't teach you the truth. They choke you with theories. When you come out, you're a bigger dunce than when you went in. You are what is generally known as a "smart aleck."

A few weeks ago, I spoke at an assembly in Columbus, Ohio. Later I received a letter from a doctor who was listening. The letter said, "I heard you speak and read your book Direct Credits for Everybody. I used to be a hard boiled Socialist, but now I am for your Direct Credits because I believe that it will make Capitalism work. I spent several years in a University. Recently, someone loaned me a copy of LAWSONOMY, which I read with unbounded interest. They taught us theories for physics in college but they used to say that a man will come along some day who will simplify the study of physics and bring it down to one practical Law and, YOU ARE THAT MAN!"

That Doctor is an honest university graduate. You don't find them very often. The professors usually cement their theories so tightly together in their skulls that nothing sensible can get through to them.

The Direct Credits Society is teaching children, as well as adults, true Economics and Physics, so now whenever they meet a college professor they laugh at him as they do at apemen, as soon as he begins to spout his theories and hearsays.

There isn't a professor on earth who can stand up against any child who has studied economics or physics from LAWSONOMY.

But the financier doesn't want that, so he tells his touts, "Keep Lawson's stuff out of the papers. Don't let Lawson talk over the radio. Don't let him feed our college donkeys or he will ruin us."

The financiers are contributing to American Colleges millions and millions and millions of dollars every year. Why?

In order to cement within the craniums of innocent kids the incentive to defraud others by enforced tribute on money loans and to perpetuate their interest collecting swindle that robs the people of the largest part of their earnings, the financiers get control of colleges by donating large sums of money to them. So colleges are now mostly breeding places for high toned tricksters and swindlers.

We want children to go to school and learn the alphabet, spell, write, read, study arithmetic, geography, grammar and honest principles.

But before students should take up the study of higher mathematics they should be taught LAWSONOMY so that they will understand the truth of life before they begin to waste their time blabbing about nonsensical theories and then trying to make them stand up by the juggle of figures.

You can tell college professors that any time they want exact knowledge concerning ECONOMICS or PHYSICS that upon request we will send one of our little children around to teach them.

One professor said to one of our little boys, "You are too young to understand Economics." Then the kid started at him and before he had finished, the professor was on the run. But the kid yelled at him, "Wait awhile, Prof., I haven't told you anything yet."

Our kids teach TRUTH and that is why they make monkeys out of those who preach FALSITY.

When professors of astronomy tell our children that the Earth dropped off of the Sun or that the moon fell off of the earth, they tell them not to talk such college nonsense.

Astronomers sometimes make good surveyors in measurements of the distances between stars, but when they tell you their theories of the movement of matter they make fools of themselves.

When you ask them what makes those northern lights they say, "Nobody knows." Still any one of our little children who has studied LAWSONOMY can explain the cause in the plainest of language.

Some of these mathematical jugglers pretend that they are so wise that nobody can understand what their calculations mean. They pretend they are too deep for you common people but I can prove that most of them are just grandiloquent fakers.

Natural Law is not too deep for anybody, because it only treats of the truth.

But when they try to teach you false theories that are too deep even for themselves as is shown by their constant changing of their own notions, they show their ignorance.

Signs should be placed at the entrance of colleges saying, "Leave truth behind, all you who enter here."

In order to have better colleges they must be taken out of the control of financiers.

Well, that's enough about the miseducating theorists. Let's talk about manufacturers' and merchants' associations.

For many years I happened to be a manufacturer and I learned first hand that manufacturers' associations were all run by financiers.

I also learned a lot about merchants' associations when I was building up the aircraft industry.

During that period of more than twenty years I received invitations from almost every city and town in America to visit them for the purpose of establishing an aircraft plant or an airport in their territory.

So for many years I traveled around the United States, visiting these different manufacturers' and merchant's associations. Yes, I visited this city and had lunch with the members of one of your merchants' associations. They wanted to establish an aircraft factory and an airport here so they invited me to come and talk business with them. They treated me fine. Of course, I had to pay my way from New York City but they paid for my lunch.

It was the same in every city, they treated me all right but when it came to a final decision, they invariably introduced me to a financier and said, "He'll talk business with you."

You merchants and manufacturers are paying fees and dues into associations run by agents of the financiers who have put out of business more than two hundred thousand factory owners and more than three million merchants during the past ten years. Think of that you manufacturers and merchants who are still struggling to stay in business. You come next. You pay fees and dues to lose your factories and stores. Take that for your lesson in subtraction. My twenty years amongst financiers is my practical experience.

They try to get merchants to not advertise in the Benefactor. They say, "That's a bad paper; Lawson, he's a bad man."

Yes, Lawson is a very dangerous man when he stands between the financier and your little children. They must take his life before they can attack the children. And he will fight for the old folks, too—your feeble old parents.

The old folks must all finish up in poor-houses or stockades sooner or later unless you, in the strength and vigor of your life, use talents God gave you to do what is right.

Unless you get out and fight for the rights of the little children and feeble old folks there is no good reason why God should continue to keep you strong at all.

One gets a horrible expression of the face when one selfishly wants everything but will give nothing. Little by little you get to look like the devil.

I defy you greedy fellows who think more of yourselves than you do of the children and old folks to look into the mirror at midnight by the light of the moon. That mug of yours will frighten you.

The face works according to microscopic muscles. They are connected with your sense machinery which acts in conjunction with your brain, and as you think, the facial expression describes your thoughts. When you think of harming anybody you show the sign of a demon. When you hate people those microscopic muscles write hate all over your face. I can tell by looking at any of your faces about how much you hate other people and how much love you have for yourself. You can't keep that out of your face. Natural law does that.

Natural law works according to action and reaction. If you act right, everything goes right with you. If you act wrong, everything goes wrong with you. If you hate others, others will hate you; you will even hate yourself. That is what the Direct Credits Society teaches children and that is why they are so far superior to children who have never been taught LAWSONOMY.

We teach children to be kind to all human beings no matter what race they come from or what religion they believe in and then God will be kind to them, and His Natural Law will make them strong and successful. So these children of the Direct Credits Society grow up to be wonderful men and women. Some of them before they are six years old know more than full grown men and women.

One little baby was bred under the rules of LAWSONOMY and is now about three years of age. The father and mother were officers of the Direct Credits Society. Previously they had inquired if there were any natural laws that would insure their having a good baby. So, I told them that they would have to live good lives themselves in order to have a good baby. I said if you want an unselfish baby you must both live unselfish lives yourselves.

I told them that inside of their own bodies were billions of menorgs that built them up and were operating them. That these menorgs created images of themselves within seeds and that the plans within the seeds contained the inclinations of the offspring that grew out of them. So that according to their thoughts and acts before the birth of the child it would think and act afterward.

For be it known that by the power of suction within the seed of woman, man's seed is drawn inside of it that causes a swirl and combination in which a predominant power of pressure produces a male infant or a predominant power of suction produces a female infant.

But, although the child is a combination of both father and mother it is more dependent upon the mother who must feed the seed until the child is born and if her blood is kept in good condition and she takes good care of herself physically and thinks of none but great thoughts, the child will do the same, unless the father is an immoral old reprobate altogether.

So, if the mother smokes cigarettes she cannot produce a normal child because the dope has poisoned the blood that the child must be built up from. The entire mental system has also been disarranged which causes the child to become more or less of a distorted creature even before it is born, if it comes to life at all.

A large percentage of babies coming from mothers who smoke cigarettes are born dead. But, if babies are actually born from cigarette smoking, cocktail drinking mothers and even if they continue to live they become more or less weaklings forever afterward.

Now, I don't want you mothers who smoke cigarettes to get angry with me for telling you the truth about these things. I want you to quit that dope smoking habit for the good of yourself and your descendants. Then I want you to tell your offspring some time in the future that you rebuilt yourselves according to the rules of LAWSONOMY and that you want them to follow those rules as long as they live and think kindly of the man who gave those rules to the world.

You must know that I am not here talking to you for my sake I am here coaching you for YOUR sake, and for the sake of your offspring.

Think of that super-intelligent Lawsonomy infant that I just mentioned, who came to live as a precious gift to the parents who followed the rules I laid down for them. As soon as it was born, the doctor said, "Gracious, I never saw such a wonderful child." They did not need the doctor but the law requires the presence of one at the birth of a baby. The child has never required the services of a doctor since, because, it creates no such things as aches or pains within itself.

When parents live naturally, there is no need for doctors or nurses any more than they are needed at the birth of other animals.

That little child is now about three years old. Her mother doesn't let her associate indiscriminately with other children. She tells her, "They are apemen and they may contaminate you by their awful conduct."

So when that intelligent kid goes outdoors for exercise, larger boys and girls try to talk to her about Santa Claus and ghosts but she just looks at them pitifully and says, "Don't be silly. There is no Santa Claus nor ghosts: you should study Lawsonomy and you would know better."

They squint and say, "Lawson—? What did you say?"

"Lawsonomy," she says.

"What is that?" they ask.

"Haven't you ever studied the Definitions of Lawsonomy?" she asks, as she looks at them seriously and sorrowfully and that ends their interview with her.

That little girl now has her own library and she can pick out any book one asks for although she hasn't learned her letters yet. She grasps a whole word or sentence at once after she has heard it spoken a few times.

All of you parents can raise Lawsonomy babies if you will prepare yourselves properly for it. As you live so you breed.

Who owns the radio? The financiers. Do you listen to the radio? Sure.

What do they tell you over the radio? Every fool thing the financier wants you to know, but nothing that Lawson tells you.

Poor devils, I feel sorry for you. I feel just as sorry for you radio drunks as the little girl feels for the children who have been taught to believe in Santa Claus and ghosts.

What do they tell your newspaper men? "Keep Lawson out of the papers. If you write anything good about him we'll fire you." The editors are afraid to publish what Lawson says word for word. Once in a while some little, green reporter writes up something and sticks it in while the financial editor is out on a fishing excursion and it gets through.

A reporter took a picture recently of one of our beautiful girl drum majors who was in a parade and then asked, "What is your name?"

She said, "I have no name."

"Well, I want to publish your picture on the front page of our newspaper."

She said, "Just say I'm a Direct Credits Officer."

The reporter then said, "I can't mention Direct Credits in our paper."

Now, who controls the magazines and newspapers all over the United States? Financiers. There are still a few newspapers that are owned by local people but they can be confiscated whenever the financier decides to grab them.

The financiers hold the mortgages and so they can take them any time they like.

So, there are no publications that are for the people. They are all for the financiers who miseducate you. That is all but one. Just one that is for the people—THE BENEFACTOR.

The financiers are rich enough to buy any publication except that which Alfred Lawson publishes. They haven't enough money nor wealth to buy the writings that he gives to the people for nothing. The financiers were never able to get Lawson on their pay roll under any pretext. His talents are unbuyable.

Have you wondered why there was no mention of this meeting in your newspaper this morning?

Such silence, however, did not keep the people from jamming this auditorium to suffocation and blockading the streets outside, did it?

But, don't blame your local newspaper men for saying nothing about this assembly as they may be our best friends and will some day be pulling strong for Direct Credits for Everybody. In fact, I know they will just as soon as the people learn to stand together and demand the inauguration of Lawson's complete program as published in a recent issue of the Benefactor.

So you must understand that there is no way for you to get any information these days except that furnished through financial agencies unless you read the Lawson Literature.

The money changers certainly have the people in a worse web than they have ever had them before during the entire history of the world.

Nearly two thousand years ago there lived a man who opposed the Interest Collecting Swindle and the money changing financiers put him to death for it.

He was a moneyless and propertyless man the same as I am. He tried to make the world better just as I am trying to make it better.

He didn't want money. He didn't want wealth. He didn't want anything but a world free from dishonest people.

So, He went into the temples and drove the money changers (the interest collecting financiers) out.

He gave His life to uphold principles that would benefit mankind.

But did the people follow in his footsteps and drive the money changers out of the temples? No, they did not. They drove them back into the temples thicker than ever.

No man has ever been on Earth since who would drive the money changers out of the temples except LAWSON.

So, if you people really want to live like that man of nearly two thousand years ago: if you actually believe in His doctrines; then you must help Lawson drive the money changers (the interest collecting swindlers) out of the temples and obliterate from the face of the earth for all time to come the abominable system which they degrade all mankind with.

Now, if you won't help Lawson drive these money changers (interest collecting swindlers) out of the temples today, then don't misrepresent yourselves by claiming to be followers of that man of two thousand years ago, because if you say that you are, YOU LIE, you are not. You are only pretenders.
