Justice for Everybody Harms Nobody

THREE CENTS

TRUTH UNADULTERATED

BY ALFRED LAWSON

SPEECH TAKEN BY BEATRICE FREESE, M. G. D. C. S., AT PONTIAC, MICHIGAN

UNLESS YOU KNOW THESE THINGS YOU ARE NOT EDUCATED

The previous speaker said you were here this afternoon to hear the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

Now, there may be some of you here today that never heard the truth. So it may jar you a bit when you hear it for the first time.

How many of you can define the word "Truth"?

Shelves upon shelves of books have been written about Truth, but not one of them, as far as I know, ever told what truth is. So today I am going to give you a correct definition of the word Truth and I want you to remember it, because I may not think of it again. So sharpen your pencils and open your ears.

You know, it doesn't take many words to define truth, but it takes whole libraries to uphold lies.

Now listen: TRUTH: THAT WHICH IS, NOT WHAT AIN'T. Simple, isn't it? But it's the truth.

One of you highbrows might say there ain't no ain't, and that may be the first time you ever told the truth; because, there ain't no ain't.

How can we know what truth is?

If you ask a hundred professors they will give you a hundred different answers. One will say, "My theory is this," and the other will say, "My theory is that," and all you get is a head full of notions.

So I will show you how to recognize truth and know how to distinguish that which is from that which ain't.

NOW: You brought here today a little worm-like machine that you call your body. You twist it this way and twist it that way, but there are certain functions connected with it that introduces me to you so that you can become acquainted with me.

Those functions, known as senses, are in your eyes, nose, mouth, ears, hooks. Through their mechanism you bring to the attention of your reasoning faculties objects of reality and by a process of mental deliberation and sortification you adjust and readjust these objects in such a way that you start thinking and when you have arrived at that stage of development you are then in a condition to see that which is and not see that which ain't.

For instance, I am standing here and unless you have the blind staggers, you can see me. If the dust hasn't mixed with the wax in your ears you can hear me when I talk. If you get close enough and use your hooks, you can feel me. And, if you haven't asthma, you might even smell me.

So when I say I am here, I am telling the truth. But if you say I am not here, you are a hallucinated liar.

NOW, just as true as I am here, so everything I say while here will be true. It will be the truth. But if you say anything I tell you is not the truth, then you must be a Tout of the financier, that's all.

In learning the truth you must get the whole truth. Don't take a little piece of it and then add to it a lot of falsehoods, a lot of theories, a lot of guesses, and tell the people it's the truth. You must be able to prove the truth.

There are thousands and thousands of men and women on earth teaching what they call Economics. The libraries are full of books labeled Economics. But if you look from now until you are blind you won't find one that says what Economics is. They all say what Economics ain't.

The people of this world have never learned what Economics is. Profound professors write ponderous books that they charge you five or ten dollars apiece for and which take you a month to read. But you can never digest them, even if you pore over them until you have long, white whiskers. They are absolutely indigestible.

I read some of those so-called Economics books fifty years ago and after wading through them, I couldn't find anything practical about them. They were written by theorists, men and women who squat down somewhere and say, "Well, that's the way it ought to be." They look out of a window and see the walls of the next building and say, "I get a hunch from that brick over there, that's the way it must be." So they write books on Economics from brick wall inspirations. Practical experience means nothing to them. But the innocents buy their books and pretend to understand them. The writers get their royalty, the publishers get their profit and the financier is tickled pink, so everybody is satisfied.

Now, the financier is a great liar, but he may possibly tell the truth once in a while, especially if he can skin someone by doing it. But his tout never tells the truth at all under any circumstances.

When the financier issues one lie his tout adds ninety-nine others to it and gives them to the public. The people pass these lies along gratuitously one to another. They become lie-carriers, just like disease-carriers, and spread them everywhere. They carry the lies of the financier and his touts around with them. Everybody they meet they fill them up with lies and that is why the people everywhere are lousy with them.

So when you hear the truth today it will be different from anything the financier and his touts and lie-carriers have filled you up with before and your tympanic organs may burst in astonishment.

You must understand the foundation of economics to know the truth. To understand Economics you must understand physics—God's natural physics—because physics and economics are like a couple that can't be separated. You must know one to know the other.

When I was a youngster and before a university theory had ever entered my head—before I had even attended the primary schools—I used to wonder what made the dust move around. I could see it in the sunlight, but not in the shade. So I wanted to know what made it move. Later I wanted to know what caused everything to move.

It was very fortunate that, that young brain of mine wasn't handed over to some university professor to ruin forever. Because I attacked the problem with a free mind and in a practical way. I began looking for a base at the roots of the subject not up in the branches.

It took a long time to gain practical experience—not theories—so that I could understand what made everything move. But with the help of a greater power than man, I finally discovered the great principle that causes the eternal movement of matter. I also learned how the Creator changes one thing to another and uses matter over and over forever without the loss of a particle. I learned that Economics is a basic material law and that its definition is the Utilization of Everything without the Loss of Anything.

So when I got to the base of Natural Laws I learned how God moves all matter, how He utilizes all matter; and how He balances all matter.

If I had gone to college and accepted their foolish theories I would be guessing at everything and trying to explain to you today that which ain't instead of that which is.

You must learn physics at its base to understand economics. And when you understand physics as is and not as theorists guess it ought to be, then you will be able to understand how God utilizes everything without the loss of anything and that is pure Economics.

Now, compare God's great principles of Economics with man-made uneconomics.

Ask these so-called expert economists the cause of this depression and they'll tell you "over production." For instance, there is too much food, so the people ought not to have so much to eat. Nice slop to feed your mentality, eh? According to that crazy theory if there is too much water people should not have so much to drink, or if there is too much air people should not have so much to breathe, eh?

God changes matter from one thing to another. He utilizes it eternally without loss. By the principle of Penetrability as explained in my book LAWSON-OMY, He produces sufficient elements right here in America to grow enough food to feed the whole world. Still the foolish people let the swindling financier curtail the growing of food in order to raise the price of it and gyp and starve them, and then believe that is Economics and prosperity.

Through His mental methods God taught man the rudiments of mechanics. You are only in the kindergarten stage of mechanics now, but He did teach you how to make an automobile; a car that will run without a horse. You can understand that now can't you?

Still about fifty years ago I used to talk with college professors and tell them about carriages that would eventually run around without horses and all they did was to open their faces and haw-haw like donkeys.

About thirty-five years ago I wrote a novel entitled, "Born Again" and pictured a race of Sagemen who lived before the flood. I said that their national band would play music in an auditorium and the people all over the country would hear it without the use of wires.

A celebrated lawyer and statesman, a friend of mine, who read the book said, "You have a great imagination, but, of course, that can never come true."

"But it will come true," said I, and then he swore I ought to be locked up in a guard house and that ended our friendship.

Of course you can understand now that what I said was true, can't you? We have the radio now to prove it, don't we?

When the man who invented the telephone told the "educated" people that we were going to talk to one another over wires, at great distances, they said he ought to be put into an asylum. But we now have the telephone, haven't we?

When the man who first told the highbrows that they would have electric lights to replace their lamps and candles with they said he ought to be in a bughouse. But in spite of such smart alecks we now use electric lights, don't we?

When, more than 30 years ago, I told scientists that we were going to establish an aircraft industry and airlines throughout the world, they said, "Lawson is crazier than a bedbug." But you know now that what I told them was true, don't you?

Now, remember, those people who repudiated the advanced truths I have just related were not ignorant, illiterate folks, but were the so-called wisemen of their day.

In the year of 1908 I wrote a letter to every college president in the U.S.A. and told them that I would teach aeronautic engineering to a class if they would get it up, and that it wouldn't cost them anything. I promised to send the typewritten lessons and charts through the mail at my own expense.

Naturally, I thought every college in America would accept that offer. But did they? Not one.

One facetious old fossil wrote, "If we catch any ballooning around our institution we'll put them where they will be well guarded."

So you see what you are up against when you bring out the truth and try to educate the people whose minds are filled with slop. You can't do it.

Little children with empty, fertile minds can easily learn the truth if the elders will only give them a chance. But the old folks cram their little brains with falsehoods and theoretical nonsense that they learned from past masters whose bones now fertilize the graveyards.

So if you don't give the children an opportunity to learn the truth they will grow up without reasoning faculties. Their minds will be like stagnant pools.

Today the Direct Credits Society is giving to the world true economics.

That is something the world has never had before. Our intelligent officers are teaching Direct Credits everywhere. Millions of people in America have already embraced it. But not one college has espoused it—yet. After the common people know all about it, then the college students will be given a chance to learn it.

From the time I offered to teach college students aeronautic engineering, five years elapsed before classes were started in those institutions for that purpose.

In the meantime, I established two aeronautic magazines (Fly, 1908, and Aircraft, 1910) and taught the children of America how to build aeroplanes that would fly. I taught them aeronautic engineering and how to build airliners, airlines and an aircraft industry. After most of the kids in America understood aerology then the colleges began to teach it.

So now I advise all educational institutions to wake up on Economics, Physics and natural mechanics, and not try to hold the world back on these important subjects. You educated men and women must find a little extra space within your skulls for the advanced truths that you have never heard before. When we prove everything we teach it is foolish for you to stick to your old, worn-out theories. If your children take up the study of Law—sonomy now they will be at least a generation ahead of the children who don't after they grow up.

You have been getting your education from the day you were born from the financiers, who have been skinning you alive. The length of your life will be considerably increased if you get away from their falsity. Also the size of your brain and your pocketbook will grow larger.

NOW: Financiers contribute the largest amount of money to the upkeep of colleges. What do you suppose they do that for? They do it because they want to perpetuate their skinning methods through their control of all institutions of learning.

Every once in a while you read about an alien financier who makes a contribution of several Million Dollars to some college. That's done so he can have his say as to what will be taught there. You may be sure that no Professor will ever be permitted to teach Direct Credits or say Abolish Interest in that institution.

NOW: Our Constitution provides the right of America to enjoy a free press. The Direct Credits Society stands for the freedom of the press with the privilege of honest editors telling the truth about everything without losing their jobs.

There are no better class of men and women on earth than editors, but the alien financiers have control of most newspaper plants and won't let the editors write as they want to. They loaned money on the building and machinery and will foreclose on the indebtedness if the editors print what Lawson says about tribute on money. So they don't say anything about it, although most of them would like to.

Newspaper men are human beings. They have common sense the same as anybody else. A newspaper man with a wife and children knows that what Lawson says is the truth. He knows that just as soon as he dies and leaves property to his wife and children, that those financial swindlers will gobble it up before he has hardly gotten cold in the grave.

A sensible newspaper man would rather trust his children to the Direct Credits Society than to the financial rogues who will rob and mistreat them.

NOW: The radio is a mechanical blessing that God permitted man to have and enjoy, but the financial swindlers got control of it and turned it into a curse for the human race. These swindlers won't permit anyone to say Abolish Interest over the radio. They know that if interest is abolished they will have to take their hooks out of the pockets of the people.

But, on the other hand, they sell the rights to Professional Spouters to degrade the minds of the people with indecent dope in order to paralyze their reasoning faculties so they cannot understand they are being used as beasts of burden and are being robbed of the largest part of their earning power.

NOW: The Financiers control the shadow picture industry and use the screen to lower the grade of morality as well as the mentality of the people so that their minds will not be strong enough to study Economics, Physics or other Natural Laws.

NOW: The Financiers not only force their own kind of books into the public schools to be sold at a profit, but they actually force little children to learn the Interest Collecting Swindle and thus create an incentive for them to cheat feeble old folks out of their homes after they have grown up. Many a child returns as a grown-up years afterward to defraud the now aged teacher who taught him the interest game when he was young and pliable. As we give so we receive.

Just as we act so there is a react sooner or later.

NOW: If every avenue of publicity is controlled by the financial swindlers and our people are degraded by the miseducation they receive from their colleges, newspapers, radio, screen and schools, what chance have they for ever hearing the unadulterated truth of God told to them? None whatsoever.

Truth is now an outlaw here on earth and will continue to be so until people stop worshipping Gold and Abolish Interest.

It doesn't make any difference what you earn, the financiers take it away from you either directly or indirectly by the interest swindle. The sooner you learn that, the better it will be for you.

NOW: The basic law of production is effort.

Therefore, effort is required to produce wealth.

There are two classes of effort put into the production of wealth. Physical effort and Mental effort.

Mental effort does the planning and Physical effort does the constructing. They can be classified in a general way as Capital and Labor.

As the planner (or Capitalist) depends upon his ability to organize and manage large numbers of laborers in Mass production to create the maximum wealth with the minimum effort there is no way to decide his earning power except by his success in the general reduction of the cost of the product and the selling price to the consumer of it.

Therefore, he takes what is known as a profit for his share of the efforts he put into the production of wealth.

On the other hand, for their share of the efforts they put into the production of the wealth the laborers receive what is known as wages or salaries — a stipulated price for each, proportionate to their different abilities and regulated according to the law of supply and demand.

But it is through the combined efforts of Capital and Labor that great wealth is produced — they are both necessary for its production.

So, with this understanding, the Capitalist could be allowed a reasonable profit and the laborer sufficient wages to enable them both to live honestly and decently according to a purchasing power each would be entitled to for his productive power, and both could get along in peace and plenty if it was not for an outsider stepping in and demanding a tribute from both Capital and Labor for the right to produce wealth.

This outsider, who produces no wealth at all, but collects a tribute from everybody who does produce wealth, is none other than that devilish old milk absorber with ingrown horns—the ancient and dishonorable FINANCIER.

It is a wonder that this old financial humbug is allowed to remain on this mundane sphere so long, but it is possible that owing to his thieving reputation the real devil will not permit him to come into his territory at all for fear that he might steal it from him.

NOW: What is wealth?

Wealth is anything and everything made valuable by human effort.

Does a financier create any wealth?

No, not a particle of it.

Then how does he get it?

He absorbs it like a sponge through a fraudulent money system.

In order that the people may facilitate the trading of their land, products or labor of different value to one another a trade convenience must be utilized for the purpose and this is arranged in the form of money made up of paper slips or coins of different denominations.

Then as all of the people agree to accept that money as a trade convenience it becomes a public instrument for everybody's use. So the people authorize their government to issue such quantities of that money as will be required for trade purposes.

The money has no value at all—the value being in the land, products or labor. The money is merely the measurement thereof and should be used to measure value as a yardstick is used to measure distance.

Now, if there was no fraud connected with this trade convenience then the government would issue and loan money to the people direct without charging any tribute for the use of it.

But there is a fraud—the biggest fraud of all time—that has been introduced into the money system and that fraud is the collecting of tribute from the person who has no money by the person who has it.

That contemptible racket is the main source from which all modern villainy flows. It is the central sewer pipe through which man accumulated his lowest degradation. It makes of men liars, cheats, thieves, murderers, beggars, blackmailers, kidnappers, dope fiends, drunkards, suicides.

It makes men look no higher for intelligent pursuits than to cheat somebody else out of what they may possess, to try and get something for nothing.

Tribute on money is the greatest monster mankind has ever encountered and he is now on the verge of falling into its filthy and cadaverous jaws. He is sealing his own destruction. He does not realize the enormity of his own destructive acts.

The money system is not being used as a trade convenience for the people to measure the value of their land, products and labor with and is not loaned to them by their government without interest, but it has been confiscated by a number of alien swindlers who utilize it to control, curtail and force tribute from the people.

And because the people of the U. S. A. have permitted these alien swindlers to get control of their money system they have already been defrauded out of seventy-five per cent of their actual wealth and forced into a future indebtedness too large for either themselves or their children to pay during the remainder of their natural lives.

Worse—they have allowed the swindlers to take away their freedom by tying them up in a web so tight that it will only be by superhuman efforts of themselves and the miraculous aid of God that they will ever be untied again. They are lying docile in the web as though they like it.

Financiers have stolen from the American people more than Three Hundred Billion Dollars worth of their property since 1929 and have signed the people up to an interest bearing indebtedness of another Three Hundred Billion Dollars.

The indebtedness for future payment consists of Bonds, Preferred Stocks, Notes, Mortgages and credit slips of various kinds upon which interest must be paid and is both public and private.

The annual interest collected by these blood-suckers has now reached the monstrous proportions of Twenty Billions of Dollars.

By this swindling process more than 200,000 American Manufacturers lost their factories since 1929—more than 3,000,000 American Merchants lost their stores—more than 3,000,000 American Farmers lost their farms and more than 5,000,000 American Workingmen lost their homes.

As the financiers now have these properties in their possession that is the proof that they swindled the people out of them. Isn't it?

The financiers certainly didn't earn them. Did they?

But that is not the end of their roguery. Unless you stop them that is only the beginning of what they intend to do to the American people.

So far the American people owe the financiers Three Hundred Billion Dollars of interest bearing indebtedness.

The entire estimated value of all wealth in America is about Four Hundred Billion Dollars. But the financiers now control over seventy-five per cent of it, which only leaves to the people about One Hundred Billion Dollars worth of wealth.

That means the financiers can foreclose on the amount of wealth they have left any time they want to and still keep the American people owing them Two Hundred Billion Dollars of interest bearing indebtedness.

There are people who think that because they have property that is not mortgaged that they don't have to pay interest. But they do. The alien financiers can tax them out of it to meet the interest on the public indebtedness which has already been contracted for by the Federal, State, County and Municipal government officials.

There are other people who seem to think that they don't have to pay interest because they do not own any property at all. But they do. The financier puts a tax upon everything that they buy as well as raises the prices to the limit in order to meet the interest they collect from every conceivable source. They make everybody pay for both the public and private interest bearing indebtedness whether they have property or not and whether they borrow money or not.

Citizens of America, you have been trapped in the slickest game ever perpetrated upon the people of this nation and you haven't even the faintest idea of what has happened to you. You have no way to find out because the big skins have gotten control of all avenues of publicity and can lead you fifty different ways at the same time.

They control all influential organizations in the U. S. A. except the Direct Credits Society. If you want to prove that statement ask the top leader of any organization in America to make a public announcement that he stands to Abolish Interest. Then you will quickly find out that he stands with the financiers for interest so that they may defraud the people out of their rightful earnings.

Every influential organization in America except the Direct Credits Society has in its key position a tout of the financier who is in a position of power to oust any leader who would dare to say publicly that interest must be abolished.

That is a sad state of affairs. Still the people themselves are responsible, to a large extent, for it, because if they would stand together they would have the strength of an elephant, but because they don't stand together they dissipate their strength at the suggestion of the rogues who skin them in so many different ways that when it comes to trying to obtain their natural rights they haven't the strength of a mouse.

By listening to the touts of the financiers they fight each other to death. They lie down in their own tracks and let a little financial spider tie them up in his web and spit in their faces. Worse, they hand over their little babies and let the financier tie them up also for future mistreatment.

These financial maniacs have turned the world into a madhouse and have set a horrible example whereby everybody is trying to strike down everybody who has acquired anything of value and take it away from them.

These maniacs teach the people through their various avenues of publicity to honor and glorify and applaud their public touts as heroes.

NOW: The Interest Collecting Swindle is an unnatural method of procedure and by its own gaseous form of construction and operation must sooner or later explode. It is an internal suction bubble without sufficient external pressure surrounding it to hold it together.

It is a case of wolf eat sheep until there are none left and then wolf eat wolf until there are none left.

The financial wolves having eaten almost all of the wealth possessing sheep in America have now turned their attention to eating one another.

The wealth that the financiers stole from the people they are now stealing from one another and by a natural course of elimination one after another will gradually fall into the pit of oblivion.

But in the meantime according to the multiplication of interest upon interest the public and private indebtedness has grown so large that the annual tribute to be collected for the use of money has reached the absurd ratio of FIVE Dollars for interest for every One Dollar in money used.

Even money has become stagnant because the financiers having taken most of the people's wealth from them has left little or no security for them to put up to enable them to borrow more. So the financiers are glutted with money but cannot lend it without adequate security.

They can of course continue to lend to the Government, and the Government lend to the people, but that is only increasing the size of the interest bearing indebtedness which of course inflates the bubble a little nearer to the bursting point.

So your different groups of Alien Financiers in America are now in a death grip fighting to take away from each other the numerous large industries that they stole from the different independent industrialists.

In order to steal these industries from one another they must control large armies of workingmen whom they entice into striking down the others' output to the ruination point. So they have succeeded in splitting up Labor into separate parts and are about to have them fight each other to death in order to see which financial group is to be the ultimate ruler of the new "American Slave State."

Because of their infernal Gold worshipping proclivities the people of Earth have lost Caste in the sight of God. They must make amends and make them quickly or pay the natural penalty. They must extirpate the cause of these horrible conditions and ABOLISH INTEREST.

There are two sides and you can take your choice which side you will stand on:

GOLD AND the FINANCIERS or GOD AND THE PEOPLE.

As far as I am concerned I stand with GOD and the people. Who are you going to stand with?
